PBS COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

Now, more than ever, individuals with developmental disabilities are seeking the opportunity to stay in their communities, pursuing their personal goals while receiving the needed levels of support to make full community inclusion a sustainable reality. What is often missing are community-based, grass-roots support networks, the interconnected social fabric that will secure life-long inclusion for individuals with disabilities as the basic human right that it is. The PBS Community Foundation was established to help people with autism spectrum disorders, developmental disabilities, and other special needs with a particular focus on self-determination. Our mission is to help these individuals access the supports they need to become active and productive members of their communities and world.
